

Rodney King

Vice President of Real Estate Development

Rodney joined EdR in 2011, serving as a regional director in EdR's management services department. He came to EdR from Summit Housing Partners, a multifamily housing company, where he served as regional portfolio manager. He holds a Tennessee real estate broker's license. He earned an M.B.A. from Belhaven University and a B.S., Financial and Organizational Management from Crichton College.

Rodney, as a vice president of real estate development, is responsible for overseeing day-to-day activities of the entire development process for collegiate housing facilities, including projects for university clients, joint venture partners and EdR's own portfolio. His experience ranges from garden style apartments to large urban mixed-use projects. Rodney also helps determine the most effective method of financing to ensure the project meets its intended goals. Upon closing of financing, he works directly with the construction and operations teams to ensure the project is transitioned seamlessly.
