

Steve Schnoor

Senior Vice President of Western Development

As Senior VP of Western Development for EdR, Steve brings 35 years' experience in construction and development. Steve's recent career has focused on public-private and mixed-use real estate development in association with universities and colleges, public entities, not-for-profit organizations and other institutions. His most recent projects include Roosevelt Point at Arizona State University-Downtown in Phoenix, AZ, the renovation of Bowles Hall at UC Berkeley – a 1928 historic residential college, and a new honors college and residence hall at Boise State University. In his current role, Steve is responsible for providing leadership to project development teams and management of EdR's projects in the western U.S. region.

Prior to joining EdR, Steve was SVP Development for Concord Eastridge, a development company focused on public-private partnerships, and was Director of Alternative Finance and Delivery for Turner Construction Co., where he was responsible for management of design/build/finance and public-private partnership development projects on a national basis. Steve also previously served as SVP Technical Services with Westin Hotels & Resorts. He earned his M.Arch. from University of Washington and his B.A. in architecture from Yale University.
